

Renewal From Sexual Addiction - About R.S.A.

If you are seeking recovery from lust and compulsive sexual behaviors. The cornerstone of recovery from R.S.A. is the power and love of Jesus Christ. Our recovery "house" is built upon the fellowship found in our groups, having a safe place to share our struggles, pain, and victories, the accountability of group, and the mutual support of your Support Team throughout the week.

How do you know if you are effected by R.S.A. We offer the following observations:

We share a common experience of engaging in sexual behaviors which are demoralizing and demeaning to ourselves or another, and which we seem to be unable to stop, even in spite of the adverse consequences to our lives. We have sacrificed relationships, jobs, or our humanity, and yet we continued to engage in these damaging and compulsive sexual behaviors.

Many of us share a common history of some type of childhood abuse. We were yelled at or told we were worthless or stupid or ugly. Today we recognize these as emotional abuse. We were neglected, knocked down, or struck with objects. Today we know this to be physical abuse. Lastly, we were touched, pawed, and coerced or forced into sexual activities. Today we call this sexual abuse. Whatever abuses we suffered we learned that to survive we had to find a way to not feel the overwhelming and unbearable pain.

Instinctively we built walls around our hearts. Lust is a magical wall in that it gives the illusion of connection. So we feel safe, but we remain alone inside our prison. Unconsciously we knew that we were somehow defective, that we were different from other human beings and not normal. Sex with ourselves or with others gave us the illusion of acceptance and thus the cure to our worthlessness. We needed a constant supply of sexual activity to stay cured. To lust is to live. Lust had become the most important thing in our lives. Some of us were willing to risk and lose everything to get and keep it. Only when we came face to face with the truth that lust was a liar did we become willing to let it go. Lust promises to connect us with others and make us whole. But it never does.

Our hope:

We have accepted that we cannot control our lustful thoughts and behaviors in our own strength. We have learned that through the power of Jesus Christ we can live sober lives, one minute at a time and one day at a time. If you identify with these issues, and if you are weary from your struggle, then we invite you to fellowship with us as we daily seek the Lord's guidance on our journey of Renewal from Sexual Addiction.
